Introduction

Being a teenager in San Diego is tough. There are difficult choices to be made and pressures to deal with everyday. Sometimes it will be up to you to make your own choices but there may be times when you need some outside help. This resource guide was made with the intention to get you help when you need it. If you just need someone to talk to, you can also find that information in this guide. Whatever your needs may be – physical, emotional, educational, or otherwise – there is someone out there to help you! Aside from getting information and advice from family, friends, teachers, counselors or other supports in your life, you can use this booklet as guidance to get the information you need to make the best decisions for your life.

If you need help – ask! Everyone has problems that are difficult to handle and nobody wants you to deal with them on your own. There is a solution to every problem so keep asking until you get the help you need to safely resolve your situation. There is always someone that cares.

Alcohol, Tobacco and Other Drugs

It might seem like everyone is drinking or taking drugs, but this isn't true. If you don't want to drink, take drugs or use tobacco then you are certainly not alone. Using alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs can negatively affect nearly every aspect of your life – your physical well-being, mental and emotional health, money, and relationships. There can also be very serious consequences if you are caught using them illegally. Even legal and prescription drugs can come with their own problems. So why do people use them? People begin using these substances for many reasons – to satisfy curiosity, to fit in with the crowd, to overcome depression, to seem more mature, etc... Most people don't think about the side effects or the possibility of addiction. Ending harmful habits like these takes willpower and sometimes requires outside help.

Child Abuse and Neglect

There are more than three million reports of child abuse in the United States each year! If you or someone you know is a victim of child abuse or neglect, there are a lot of people out there to help you. It is against the law for anyone to physically or emotionally abuse a child or put a child in harm's way. It is also illegal to intentionally neglect a child by not giving them proper care, food, clothing, and shelter. If you think you are being abused or know someone who is, it can be a really scary time. The best thing for you to do is to tell someone you trust – a teacher, a counselor, a friend's parent, or contact one of the resources listed here.

Decision-Making

Decisions, decisions, decisions. Everywhere you turn, there is another decision to be made. In fact, decision- or choice-making is part of everyday life. Making decisions isn't always easy – especially when you are a teen and are still learning a lot about who you are, who you want to be, what you want, and what you like. It's important to remember that in the end your decisions are going to affect you the most, so try to stop and think about what is really best for you.

Peer Pressure

Make sure that the decisions that YOU make are directly related to the needs YOU have, how important it is for YOU to satisfy this need and, of course, what YOU want to get out of it. It can be really easy to be influenced by friends or other people, but most of the time you will feel much better in the long run if you follow your heart and instincts and make the choices that are right for you in YOUR life – not anybody else's.

Making Mistakes/Having Regrets

Depending on the outcome of the decision or choice that you made, it's normal to feel that you should/could have made a better choice. Everybody makes mistakes – it is a part of life and it is completely okay! Try to make the best of the situation even if it's painful. Learn from the mistake or regret and use that information to make better decisions in the future. If there are any consequences from your decisions, deal with them as soon as you can. Avoiding them usually just makes things worse!

How Are Decisions/Choices Made?

You make certain decisions or choices because you have a certain need - whether you're conscious of it or not. The need could be:

- Physical – you're hungry, thirsty, tired
- Emotional – you're feeling afraid, unloved, angry, stressed, unsure
- Social – you're feeling lonely, miss your friends, or want to have fun
- Economic – you need money

And what you actually end up deciding will depend on a bunch of different factors:

- Personality type
- Likes/dislikes and needs/wants
- Values and beliefs
- Knowledge and previous experiences
- Self-confidence

Tips/Steps for Decision Making:

- Define and clarify the problem. Try writing a short description of the decision you need to make.
- Identify what you want to come out of the decision and identify any challenges you may have to overcome them in order to make the decision.
- Come up with options. What are your choices? List them. Brainstorm to help you find different ways of dealing with the problem.
- Analyze the options. What are the consequences of each option? How will each choice affect you?

- Choose an option. Which option feels best? What does your gut instinct say to choose?
- Justify the option. Why does that choice feel best? What is it about that decision that feels so good? If there are clear-cut reasons why, list them.
- Take Responsibility. While you are not always responsible for or in control of what happens to you, you are completely responsible for your reaction and how you deal with a situation. The way you react to a situation can completely change its outcome!

Disabilities

Everyone comes into this world with different abilities. This, among other things, is what makes humankind so diverse, which is a beautiful thing. Sometimes, if other people don't know what it is like to be differently abled or don't understand a disability, they can react in ways that don't always make sense. Teens living with disabilities not only face the issues that all other teens do; they must also deal with many other problems that are related to their disability. As a teen living with a disability, it is important to know that you have rights and to know what your rights are. Some disabilities can be seen by looking at a person, while others may be hidden. Whether it is a physical disability, learning disability or other challenge you are facing, there is plenty of support out there that you should be aware of.

Discrimination

Most people experience discrimination at some point in their lives based on some quality or identifying factor. Gender, age, race, ethnicity, income, religion, sexual orientation, immigration status, and more are all protected under law. In a study done at the University of California, Los Angeles, 60% of teens that were surveyed reported discrimination from other teens, 63% reported discrimination from adults, and 12% said they experienced discrimination every day. So what do you do when you get discriminated against? Unfortunately, the world is not a "fair" place for anyone – there are always going to be people who think they have a right to disrespect others. It is okay to feel frustrated or upset. Try to use the situation as a learning experience and speak up for yourself respectfully if it is appropriate. If the discrimination is taking place at school or at work, you can report it. You have the right to feel safe at school and at work. You might not always be able to make a report at school or at work but you can definitely get help from the following organizations.

American Civil Liberties Union – A national organization that advocates for individual rights and educating the public on a broad array of issues affecting individuals and groups.

Driving

Getting your driver's license is a major rite of passage. In California, you must be at least 16 years old to be eligible for a driver's license. If you aren't 18 yet, you'll need to get a learner's permit first, take driver education, and have to follow certain rules until you turn 18. If you are already 18, you can get an instruction permit so that you can practice driving before you apply for a license. Anyone that wants to get a permit or driver's license will need to provide certain information and documents to the Department of Motor Vehicles such as a social security number, name, address, birth date, and proof of insurance. A vision exam, written test, and driving test have to be passed before you will be issued a license.

Eating Disorders

Pressures from friends, family, the media, and ourselves to look a certain way can sometimes lead to the misuse and abuse of food. Eating disorders are so common in America that one or two out of every 100 students will struggle with one. Each year thousands of teens develop eating disorders or problems with weight, eating, and body image. An eating disorder can prevent someone from thinking clearly about their bodies and the food they eat. Eating disorders come in many forms: anorexia, bulimia, bingeing, compulsive eating, and emotional eating. No matter which form an eating disorder takes, it can be extremely harmful to your physical and mental health and well-being. Eating the right kinds of food in the right amounts is one of the most important things you can do to keep your body functioning at 100%. As a growing person, you need the right foods in your body so that you develop properly and still have enough energy to do all the things you need and want to do! Developing healthy eating and exercise habits now will make it much easier to continue making better food choices in the future.

Education

Going to school might seem like a pain sometimes, but getting a high school education can open huge doors for your future. There are not only personal and social benefits to going to school but getting an education will have a great influence on your future. In addition, did you know that it is a basic human right to have access to education?? Anything declared to be a basic human right must have some importance, right? However, school isn't always easy and you might find yourself in need of some help getting to graduation, earning your G.E.D., and deciding if you want to continue your education afterwards. There are a lot of options so you should never give up! Talk to friends, family members, teachers, and school counselors until you find the educational path that is right for you.

Emotional and Mental Health

Teens are under a huge amount of stress these days. School, friends, family, jobs, dating, and more can be overwhelming – even when all those things are going great! When problems come up in one or more of those areas, the stress may become more and more difficult to deal with and begin to take its toll on your emotional and mental health. It is normal to have ups and downs and you don't have to feel good all the time. If you are having bad feelings or thoughts that start to interfere with your life or normal activities or you are so overwhelmed with your problems and feel like you'll never solve them, you might want to consider talking to someone. Sometimes just talking about it will make you feel better. But if you need more than that, there are people out there that can help.

Employment

In California, anyone 12 – 18 can get a work permit but the places, hours, and times that you can work will vary and might be limited based on your age, family situation, school status, and other circumstances. Here are some general guidelines but it is best to check the State of California, Department of Industrial Relations website below for up to date laws. Here is a brief review of state laws:

- Work permits can be obtained from your school. You will need to get one before you start a job.
- School is a priority! Depending on your age, the hours you can work on a school day and during a school week will be limited.
- You won't be able to do certain jobs because of safety issues.
- You might need to file a tax return if you make a certain amount of money.
- Employers must pay you minimum wage.
- When you turn 18, you no longer need a work permit and child labor laws no longer apply to you.

Gender Identity and Sexual Orientation (LGBTQIA)

As you grow up and start figuring out who you are, part of that includes learning more about your own sexuality and exploring relationships with other people. Many people at some point think about or question their sexuality and/or gender identity. That is very normal. Be patient with yourself as you are figuring out who you are and what you want. Some people know their sexuality or gender identity at a very young age, while others figure it out when they are much older. Remember to be patient with yourself. Everyone's process is different. The terms used to describe gender and sexuality often change over time. If you hear a term you don't know you should feel comfortable asking what it means. Some of the terms you might hear people use are below. Remember, you have the right to choose how you identify regardless of the definitions, and other people should respect that.

Heterosexual or straight – someone who is romantically, emotionally, and/or sexually attracted to people of a sex different from their own. Commonly thought of as “attraction to the opposite sex”.

Gay- a term given to males who are sexually and emotionally attracted to some other males. Colloquially used as an umbrella term to include all LGBTQIQI persons.

Lesbian – a term given to women who are sexually and emotionally attracted to some other women.

Bisexual – also “bi”. A person who is attracted to two sexes or two genders, but not necessarily simultaneously or equally. Also, because there are more than two sexes or genders (see transgender and intersex) this term can mean different things to different people.

Pansexual- also omnisexual. A person who is attracted to people across the gender spectrum including men, women, genderqueer, and transgender people. This does not mean they are attracted to every person, but that their attraction is not based on gender.

Gender- A socially constructed system of classification based on masculinity and femininity. Gender characteristics can change over time and are different between cultures. One's sense of self as masculine or feminine can be independent of external genitals. Gender is often conflated with sex. This is inaccurate because sex refers to bodies and gender refers to personality characteristics.

Transgender – an umbrella term for people whose gender identity, expression or behavior is different from those typically associated with their assigned sex at birth, including but not limited to androgynous people, genderqueers and gender non-conforming people. Many people use the term “trans” for short. When referring to transgender people it is important to use the pronoun they prefer or the pronoun that they identify with. Some transgender people decide to use hormones or surgery to change their physical bodies, while others may not. Both may identify as transgender.

Transgender Man- also referred to as transman or FTM (female to male). A term for a transgender individual who currently identifies as a man.

Transgender Woman- also referred to as transwoman or MTF (male to female). A term for a transgender person who identifies as a woman.

Genderqueer (or Gender nonconforming)- A person who redefines their gender, or who refuses gender altogether, or does not conform to traditional gender norms.

Intersex – having both male and female anatomical characteristics, including in varying degrees, reproductive and secondary sexual characteristics. Intersex individuals may or may not identify as transgender.

Preferred Gender Pronoun- or PGP, refers to the pronoun (ie he, she, they) that a person prefers when referring to themselves. Sometimes you cannot tell by looking at someone what their gender identity or preferred pronoun is, so it can be helpful to ask someone what they prefer.

Questioning – anyone that isn't sure about their sexual orientation or gender identity.

Queer – historically a negative term used against people perceived to be LGBT. However, “queer” has been more recently reclaimed by younger people as an umbrella term to describe all those who do not conform to rigid notions of gender and sexuality. Queer also has been used in a political context and in academic settings to challenge traditional ideas about identity. However, queer is still seen as a derogatory term to some folks who are used to hearing it in a more negative context.

Ally- A person who advocates for or supports members of a community outside their own, reaching across differences to achieve mutual goals. Ally is used differently in different contexts. For example, a straight person could be an ally to the gay community or a white person could be an ally to communities of color.

Asexual/nonsexual – someone that does not feel sexually attracted to other people and doesn't have a desire for sex.

Down Low- A term used to refer to men who maintain a heterosexual identity and lifestyle in their daily lives, but engage in same-sex intercourse as a secret part of their lives.

Outing – Exposing someone's sexual orientation to others, usually without their permission. Even if you know someone's sexual orientation, it is important to respect their privacy and right to decide when and if to disclose that to other people.

There are many terms used within the LGBT community. You may feel that you strongly identify with some of them or that you don't identify with any of them. Remember that these are just labels. Some people find the labels helpful in finding community, while others prefer not to use labels at all. Being attracted to other people and having sexual feelings is a natural part of life. If these feelings are new or not what you expect, you might be a little confused. As you grow and get older, there will be a lot of changes going on in your body and your mind. Just know that whatever you are feeling is okay, and you are not alone. Take your time to figure out your feelings and talk to someone you trust.

Health and Nutrition

When you've got your health, you've got everything. If you think about it, it's true. When you don't feel good, other things seem less important. Getting healthy and staying healthy are important goals. As a teenager, it might be difficult to feel like you are in control of your own health. You might have to eat the food that your parents buy and make for you, are limited to lunch in the school cafeteria, or have lots of extracurricular activities or obligations that keep you from getting enough activity. Many health problems can be prevented if you take care of yourself. The best way to do that is to make it a habit to exercise, eat right, get enough sleep, and get regular medical, dental and eye checkups. Eat and drink in moderation, don't smoke and if you choose to have sex, protect yourself!

Intimate Partner Violence

Relationships can be hard work. It's normal to have ups and downs. But there are some things that do not belong in a healthy relationship and that you shouldn't put up with. These include being:

- Put down
- Yelled at
- Shoved
- Controlled
- Ignored
- Afraid of your partner
- Embarrassed in front of others
- Told what you can or cannot wear

These are indications of intimate partner violence, which is defined as violent behavior between people that are in romantic relationships. It could be physical, emotional, financial, or sexual. No matter what kind it is, intimate partner violence can happen to anyone and have some pretty serious long-term effects on individuals and families. Even if it happens once, it's not what you deserve – you deserve respect.

Just like in any other case of violence or abuse, there are lots of people that can help you. If you need someone to talk to, somewhere to go, or need any other form of assistance, tell someone you trust or contact one of the numbers provided here.

Mentoring

We all have dreams for the future but figuring out how to make them come true isn't always easy. Sometimes influence from family and friends makes it difficult for us to see our goals clearly. Finding a mentor to help you work through some of those difficult decisions in your life can really help. Mentors provide support, guidance, and encouragement to help you figure out how you can achieve your dreams. A mentor is not just a friend, their purpose is to be a positive role model for you and help you lead a successful life. Whether your goals are school- or career-oriented, mentors will work with you to develop a plan customized to your own life and will support you along the way.

Personal Safety

Personal safety just means keeping yourself safe from harm. People, places, and things should not lead you to danger. Being aware of your surroundings and prepared to protect yourself will go a long way in keeping you out of harm's way.

Tips to keep safe:

- Set and communicate limits – people won't know unless you tell them!
- Trust your intuition – if something feels wrong, bad, too good to be true, etc... it probably is! If someone gives you the creeps, follow your instincts.
- Be aware of yourself, others, and your surroundings.
- Avoid unnecessary risks.
- Say no – and mean it – scream it out loud and make a scene if you have to!
- ALWAYS have a plan.

Running Away and Homelessness

Getting through your teens years and living at home with parents/guardians can seem nearly impossible sometimes. Maybe you think they don't understand you or they won't let you do the things that you want to do. Maybe they have some rules that you don't like or there is some domestic violence going on. It doesn't matter what the reason is – sometimes you might feel like you want to just run away. Running away from home might sound fun, glamorous, or like it is the only answer. Think it through before making a quick decision, though – it can be a tough world out there and you are going to need food, money, and a roof over your head. Try talking through whatever problems you might be having. Or, maybe talk to your parent/guardian about a safe place (a friend or relative's house, a safe local hangout) where you can go to get away when things get tough without putting yourself in any danger.

Sexual Health Issues

Everyone is having sex, right???

Wrong. Less than half of teenagers in high school are having sex. With that said, everyone is talking about it. How do you know if you are ready? How do you keep yourself safe from STDs, unplanned pregnancy, and abuse? There is so much information out there about sex. Make sure you have all the facts so that you can make the best decisions for YOU and stay safe.

Am I Ready for Sex?

For most people deciding when to have sex can be a pretty difficult decision. Only you can decide when you are ready for sex. Don't let anyone pressure you into having sex. The answer to "Am I ready?" is different for every person. There is no "magical" age. There is no set time in a relationship to start having sex with your partner. And, there is no rule which says you must have sex with someone, even if you have been dating for a long time. Sex should be a joyful, comfortable, and guilt-free experience for both you and your partner. To make the best decision for you, you should know:

- The right person will wait until you are ready.
- You always have the right to say "No" to sex even if you have said "Yes" before!

Here are some questions to help you decide if you are ready.

- Am I feeling pressured to have sex by my partner, my friends, or television and movies?
- Will having sex fit with my religious or moral beliefs?
- Will I feel guilty if I have sex?
- Do I want to have sex to get love, affection, or attention?
- Do I want to have sex to prove that I am sexually attractive?
- Am I afraid that my reputation will be hurt if I have sex?
- Do I think sex will bring my partner and me closer together, both emotionally as well as physically?
- Do my partner and I both want the same things from sex?
- Can I talk to my partner about birth control and can we share the responsibility for birth control?
- Can I talk to my partner about sexually transmitted diseases and how we can protect ourselves?
- If birth control fails, are we ready to deal with an unplanned pregnancy?

Sexually Transmitted Diseases (STDs)

Sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) are passed from one person to another during sexual contact. The bad news is that they are very common – more than half of sexually active people will get one at some point in their lives! The good news is that you can protect yourself by practicing safe sex (condoms please!). Most STDs don't have any symptoms, so you might not even know that you have one. If you're sexually active, it is really important that you get tested regularly so that if you do become infected with an STD, you can get treatment. Some STDs can be cured with medications. Others can be treated with medications to ease the symptoms and long-term effects of the diseases. Your best option is to use protection and talk to your partner(s) about getting tested for STDs.

Birth Control

If you are having sex with someone of the opposite gender, it is a good idea to use one or more forms of birth control to avoid an unplanned pregnancy. Four out of five teen pregnancies are not planned. Parenting is expensive and hard work!! Talk to your doctor about which kind of birth control is best for you and your partner. Some common forms of birth control are condoms, the pill, the patch, and intrauterine devices (IUDs). In California, anyone 12 and older can go to certain health clinics (find the clinic closest to you at familyfact.org) to get free or low-cost birth control – so there is no excuse! Whether you are a guy or a girl, make sure you are talking to your partner about birth control. It is never up to just one partner.

Sexual Abuse/Sexual Assault

Any type of sexual activity that you don't consent to is sexual assault and is illegal. There are lots of ways that sexual assault can occur. It could be touching someone without their consent or it could be rape. Young women in their late teens and early 20s are more likely to be victims of sexual assault, but it can happen to anyone. Sexual abuse or assault can also occur between any two people – not necessarily strangers. It could be friends, family members, or a boyfriend/girlfriend. If you think you have been sexually assaulted, contact someone you can trust to support you to make a report and get help. If you don't know who to talk to, call any of the resources below and someone will be there to help you.

Sexual Harassment

Sexual harassment is unwelcome sexual behavior at school or in the workplace. It could be coming from a teacher, administrator, peer, supervisor, co-worker, or customer. This includes sexual comments, degrading jokes or pictures, pressure for sexual favors, inappropriate touching, or even an assault. If sexual harassment happens to you at school or your job, there is likely a contact person in your student or employee handbook. If you need help, talk to a trusted teacher or supervisor.

Suicide

Suicide is the third leading cause of death for 15 to 24 year olds and the fourth leading cause of death for children between the ages of 10 and 14 according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). Feelings of hopelessness and anxiety, along with feelings of being trapped in a life that one can't handle, are very real contributors to teen suicide. Sometimes the pressures of life seem like too much to handle, and suicide seems like an easy escape. Suicide is never the way to solve a problem and will have a deep impact on everyone around you. If you or someone in your life is thinking about suicide, get help right away by calling one of the suicide hotlines, your doctor, or a trusted friend or adult. There are definitely tough times and it is okay to feel sad, depressed, or overwhelmed. Just know that it is possible to overcome any challenges that you are facing and there are people around you that are willing to help you out.

Support Groups

We can all feel like we are alone if we are going through a difficult time. That is just a fact of life. The good news is that we are not alone! If you are going through something, it is pretty much a guarantee that someone else is going through or has been through the same exact thing. There are support groups for pretty much anything you can imagine. If you need someone to talk to or feel like nobody understands, a support group can be a great place for you to connect with others.

Teens and the Law

Turning 18 means that you are an adult in the eyes of the law. What does that mean? It means that your parent or guardian is no longer responsible for anything that you do...YOU ARE! You now have rights and responsibilities that you didn't have to worry about in years 1-17. At age 18:

I have a duty to:

- Register for the draft (males only) within 30 days of my 18th birthday or be imprisoned or fined.
- Pay taxes on the money I make.
- Serve on juries when I am summoned.

As an adult, I can:

- Vote.
- Make a will and/or trust.
- Apply for credit in my own name.
- Rent or lease an apartment in my own name.
- Buy real estate in my own name.
- Get a job without a work permit.
- Get married without my parent's consent.
- Register as a domestic partner without my parent's consent.
- Get medical treatment without my parent's consent.
- Get a driver's license without my parent's consent.
- Join the military without my parent's consent.

I can no longer:

- Depend on my parents to support me or pay my bills.
- Let my parents take legal responsibility for my actions.
- Have my police record "sealed".
- Be tried in juvenile court on a criminal charge.

Until I am 21, I cannot legally:

- Buy, sell or consume alcoholic beverages.
- Be in a car with liquor, even if the container is sealed, without a parent or guardian.
- Work in a place that sells alcohol as its main business.
- Be in a bar unless I have legal business there.

Sometimes this freedom can feel great, but it is important to know all the facts so that you don't get yourself into any trouble with the law. Even if you don't feel different or ready for it, you carry much more responsibility for your actions when you turn 18.

Volunteering

Volunteering is a really great way to spend time in your teen years – you will benefit in so many ways. It will help you to build skills, learn new things, explore jobs and careers, meet people, stay active, have fun, AND give back to the community! Still not convinced? Volunteering is an amazing resume/college application-builder and can often lead to a paid job. The best part is that almost any business or community organization would welcome a volunteer – so the possibilities are endless! If you are looking for ideas, check out the links below to find a project or opportunity that is right for you. There are also special opportunities like the AmeriCorps and PeaceCorps that are paid volunteer positions with opportunities to earn money that you can use for your education.
